Nº.0. López Sánchez, L. and Del Campo Sánchez, A. (2002, 6^a ed.): Prevention of sexual abuse to minors. Guide for parents and educators. Salamanca, Amarú.

Sexual abuse to minors has started to be recognized recently in our country, especially, after the research of the professor of Psychology of Sexuality, Félix López Sánchez, about the prevalence of sexual abuse in Spain. In his research, he found that around 23% of women and 15% of Spanish men have suffered some type of sexual abuse during their childhood. The high prevalence of abuse found, although expected—since it is similar to the percentages and proportions found by other research conducted in different countries—and the knowledge of the clear negative short and long-term affects that the abuse has on the minors, has encouraged us to start working in the field of prevention, elaborating the present material.

The first edition of this material was published by the Department of Work and Social Matters in 1999 and distributed for free by FAPMI.
